

Sustainable transport training for officials

Participate in our free training seminar for mid-career transport professionals from new European Union member states, accession countries and neighbouring EU countries.

This practical course presents a unique opportunity for urban transport officials to exchange experience and develop their professional skills in sustainable mobility. Places on this course are limited and will be awarded to applicants who can demonstrate their commitment and their ability to contribute to improving urban transport and mobility. Participation is free of charge.

WHEN: 21-23 April, 2008 in Kraków, Poland
[Application deadline: 20 March 2008]

WHAT: The course will include three modules:

- Transport solutions for people with reduced mobility
- Access restrictions and environmental zones
- Transport socialization and education

Please contact Gabor Heves at GHeves@rec.org to obtain a registration form. Limited reimbursement of travel costs is available.

This training course is financed by the European Commission's DG Transport and Energy as part of its ELTIS initiative.
